Brrrr-illiant winter fundraising

Here are some ideas to help you fundraise during the winter months.

Fundraising with a bang

Put on a bonfire night supper for friends, family or work colleagues. Your guests can be warmed by the fire and dazzled by fireworks, while enjoying hot dogs and toasted marshmallows. Ask people to donate what they would to see a fireworks show and watch your fundraising shoot up.

Give it up

Instead of making a New Year's resolution why not give something up? Whatever your weakness, it could be booze, fast-food or fizzy drinks, give it up for one month (or more if you have the willpower) and add the money you would have spent on it to your fundraising. Get your friends, colleagues and family involved to. You could even have a cash penalty for any slip-ups.

Regifting auction

We all get gifts that we aren't keen on but instead of returning them or leaving them to gather dust why not ask people to donate them and auction them off? That way these unwanted gifts get a new home and raise money to help protect children from abuse. Perfect to do just after Christmas.

Big night in

Winter is the perfect time to hold a big night in! It's simple; invite your friends for a fun night in at yours and ask them to donate what they would have spent on a night out. Whether its food, drink, a movie, or maybe even some board games, put on whatever you think will make a big night in just as good as a big night out.

Wrap it up

Hire yourself out to wrap people's Christmas presents. Charge a suggested donation for each gift. You could raise the price depending on the size and difficulty of each item that needs wrapping or depending on how good you are.
